Art Basel's croc of gold

Mind your step: in true Floridian style, a number of works at this year's fair take crocodiles or alligators as their subjects

Parts of the Brain (2023)

GALERIE CHRISTOPHE GAILLARD

Part of a multimedia installation by the New York-based artist and filmmaker Cate Giordano, this pale-faced croc is an example of how Giordano “dives into the psychological interpretation of animal and mythological figures as representations of human behaviour and the ways in which these motifs define our understanding of life and what comes after”, according to a gallery statement. Light stuff, then. The installation is available for a relative bargain, too: $12,000.
